Warning- You are about to read a novel in the literary tradition. The author will do his best to stretch your mind. Relax and float downstream. “A Coming of Age Romp 'For Whom the Book Tells' is the first volume of George Pritchard Harris' 'Four Fathers' Octology project. Harris, a retired trial lawyer living in Costa Rica, describes the incidents portrayed in his book as 'entirely figments of the author's overworked imagination,' an apt inventory of these eccentric, but very real characters and their emotional coming-of-age-in-the-1960's transit in the light of history and religion, set forth in Harris' scholarly, yet earthy and witty, writing style, taking full advantage of his voluminous vocabulary, and shaped by his views of human behavior and sexuality. I invite readers to embark on a wild, juicy journey through the 'Four Fathers' Book Series.” Margaret S. McMillion, Author "Personal Baggage" “George Harris is a brilliant writer! Love his insight into life in a wonderful suburb. I look forward to reading all of his books.” Virginia J. Pullman “Ribald and rollicking...” Andrew MacRae, Author "Murder Misdirected" “The book was great, well written and brought back memoirs of growing up in the 60's. You should read 'FOR WHOM THE BOOK TELLS.’” John M. Jacobs “The vocabulary is amazing and the story keeps you involved. The character development is wonderful throughout. You really get to know them...” Sarah Stockel “More than sound. More than fury. Never has nothing been signified so eloquently, and with such raucous aplomb.” Joe Pitaglia, retired leader of Milwaukee’s legendary, "The Polka Pals" “Sexual intellectual” or “Intellectual Sexual?” Head first or bottoms up? Do you ever really care whether it is foreplay or post-coital?” Irene M.
